

SELECT QUOTES FROM JASON ROSENSTOCK

FROM VARIOUS PUBLICATIONS

AMERICAN BANKER BankThink

BANKS SHOULD FEAR A 'BLUE WAVE' IN THE HOUSE, RIGHT? NOT SO FAST BY JASON ROSENSTOCK

If one were to believe only the clickbait headlines, the ascendant Democratic majority in House is being built on a foundation of populist, anti-establishment socialists whose aim is to undermine and replace America's open-market system with a leftist command economy that will destroy our financial services system. The truth, however, couldn't be more different....
.... This means that while there will certainly be a leftward tilt toward the agenda and makeup of legislative actions in the committees, the narrow margins on the House floor could allow the New Dems to have influence on that agenda since it would only take a fraction of the group to affect the outcome of votes – either procedural or substantive.

Vox

ALEXANDRIA OCASIO-CORTEZ IS ONE OF MANY REASONS TO CARE ABOUT THE HOUSE COMMITTEE THAT OVERSEES BANKING PUBLISHED JAN 17, 2019

"Chair Waters is a skilled legislator, and I think this committee structure will allow her to harness those talents to try to guide the committee to find consensus. She's a real dealmaker. She's done it in the past with Republicans, and she may have to do it now internally a bit," Rosenstock said. "The question is whether the newer members will be willing to sacrifice the perfect for the good."

The Washington Post

THE FINANCE 202: BIG BANKS ARE IN FOR ROUGH RIDE IN NEW WASHINGTON PUBLISHED NOV 7, 2018

"A key question ... is whether the attention will amount to more than a public drubbing. A lot of this is headline risk, but they have to prepare to handle that and make sure it doesn't spiral into real regulatory or legal concerns," says Jason Rosenstock, a partner at the lobbying firm Thorn Run Partners.

AP

PROGRESS? GRIDLOCK? HOW MIDTERM VOTE COULD AFFECT US ECONOMY PUBLISHED OCT 30, 2018

"Still, if Democrats regain the House, the president might feel pressure to produce some tangible legislative results ahead of his own quest for re-election in 2020. Trump is the wild card here," said Jason Rosenstock, a financial industry lobbyist with Thorn Run Partners. "He may want to be seen as a deal-cutter going into the 2020 election."

POLITICO Morning Money

TRUMP'S TRADE WARS BITE THE GOP PUBLISHED SEPT 4, 2018

"While newspapers and clickbait websites want to push a narrative that this primary season showed both a far-leftward and anti-establishment lurch by Democrats, a simple examination of the facts shows that is not the case. ... [T]he reality is that the DCCC (i.e., the establishment) endorsed candidate won 95% of the time."